

David Hummels

David Hummels
Purdue University

"Time as a Trade Barrier"

Tuesday, March 9, 2004
3:30 p.m. *
Mershon Center
Room 120

David Hummels received his Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Michigan in 1995. He is an Associate Professor of Economics in the Purdue University Krannert School of Management, and a Faculty Research Fellow of the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Hummels' research focuses on empirical investigations in international trade, with a special focus on models of product differentiation in trade and the effects of transportation and infrastructure on trade and economic development. His most recent work focuses on the effect of disruptions to international commerce, such as those caused by the 9/11 attacks, and the west coast port lockout.

Hummels has worked as a consultant to the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank, and the Public Policy Institute of California. Previously he has been an Assistant Professor of Economics at the University of Chicago's Graduate School of Business and a Visiting Scholar at the International Monetary Fund and the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis.